

Driving Profit & Growth

Creating the Next Generation of Company Managers

March 31-April 1, 2020 | Irving, TX

GIVE NEW MANAGERS THE TOOLS TO SUCCEED

Becoming a new Manager is a challenge that requires new skills, new learning, and a new approach. Simply promoting your top-performing Technician, Installer, or Salesperson without training will not get the job done, and only sets the employee up to fail.

Creating the Next Generation of Company Managers will show new Managers how to transition from being an Employee and succeed in their new management role. Owners who are adding their first Manager should attend to find out how they can set up their new manager to win.

Chris Koch brings nearly three decades of HVAC experience to BDR's clientele. Chris started at the ground floor and worked his way up to VP of Service. His experience ranges from a start up to $60 Million in sales.

Chris has gained a rich, diverse exposure to many ways of doing business. He is a team building leader and possesses vital hands-on experience.

Key class takeaways

By attending this class, new Managers will learn:

- The difference between an Employee and a Manager, and how their role needs to change
- New skills for time management, delegation, and prioritization
- Strategies for mentoring their direct reports
- Key financial metrics to measure success in Install and Service
- How to be an effective leader for their department and the company
